Testimonials from listeners of "The Finer Points - Aviation Podcast"

"Since I especially value The Finer Points, I thought I should tell you why. Three things stand out, in my view:

1) The content. TFP is not just hangar flying; it's good information from someone who obviously knows what he is doing. One of your recent tips helped me on my private pilot written exam just today the fact that winds are always given in true directions, except on the ATIS. I read two magazines, AOPA's Flight Training and Aviation Safety, and I have a shelf of books, two by my own instructor, but no other source has made that fact stand out the way TFP did. 2) The editing. Related to the effective content, you must really work hard to keep TFP concise and focused. I'm sure it takes time and self-discipline, and I appreciate it. 3) The music. Maybe it's not essential to learning about aviation, but your music is another reason I look forward to TFP every week. 4) Well, o.k., there's a fourth: I appreciate the high quality of your videos and the extremely reasonable price."

Thank you. Keep up the good work.

Over the past 18 months, I've repeatedly listened to every podcast and safety session, the High Airwork CD and have watched most of your videos. I learned so much from them and even taught my instructor a thing or two.

Thank you so much for your service. Without a doubt, you have made me a safer pilot. Now I'm on to instrument training.

-- Short, very informative, and instructional pieces of information. Safety sessions help people get information on issues that they have always worried about and now may be able to prevent in the future. Thank you.

-- The podcast is an excellent educational website from a credible source. I will listen to every podcast as long as it is produced.

-- "Brilliant! I just discovered the site about a week ago. As a student pilot, I'm finding the podcasts a fountain of knowledge and somewhat of a mentor. Before takeoff briefings, actual audio of radio work, this stuff is a huge benefit for an aspiring pilot. In addition to that there is a sense of community which can be important for a newbie such as myself. The diversity in the topics is a great balance as well

-- I'm a student pilot getting ready for my FAA ride and I love your podcast. There are a lot of little tips that have helped me a great deal. Not only are the podcasts informative and helpful, but they are entertaining as well. I enjoy the interviews. As a pilot just starting my life as a pilot it's nice to hear from people who are more experienced and can share their stories."
